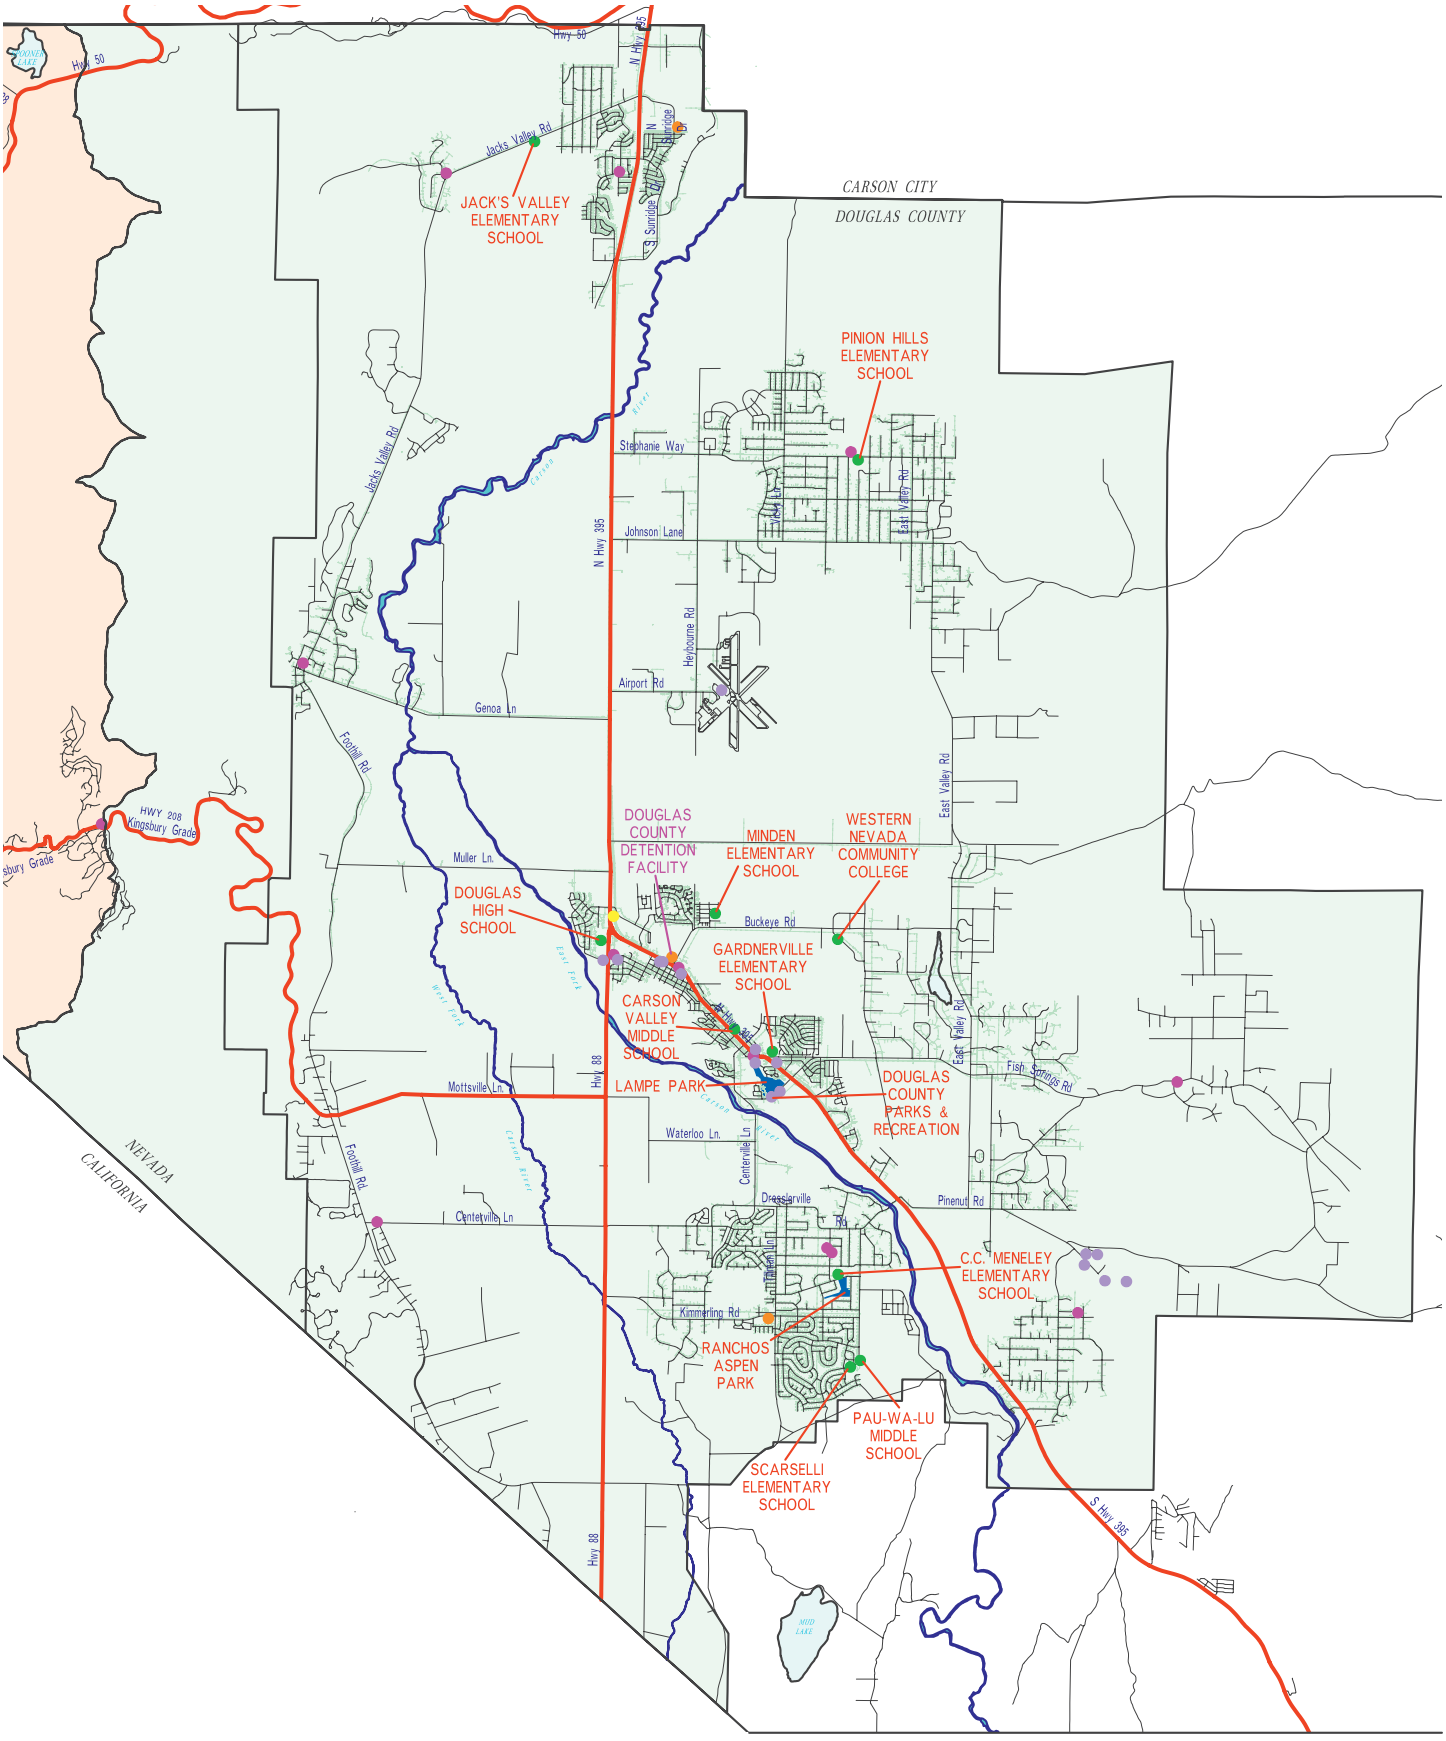
CARSON VALLEY AREA FACILITIES



Since no single method of communication is fool proof, Carson City public safety officials use a combination of methods to keep the public informed during an emergency.

Local government Public Information Officers (PIO) gather key information from first responders and elected officials and produce press releases that are then the broadcast and printed by local media outlets.

Emergency Managers can initiate the Emergency Alert System (EAS). This system interrupts local radio, television, and cable broadcasts with emergency alerts and instructions to the public.

Public Safety Officials can directly broadcast messages over the government cable channels (Channel 10 and 26 on Carson City Charter Cable).

First Responders and credentials volunteers can do door-to-door alerting citizens of impending hazards.

A reverse communications telephone reporting system can be used to telephone residents and relay emergency information. The reverse communications system is a computer system that calls telephones in a particular geographic area, and plays a recorded message. However, there is an issue to consider, availability of electric utility power. In an emergency. The electric utility power may fail at any time. This means that any telephone which relies on electric utility power to function will not work. If you have an "old fashioned" telephone which only connects to a phone line with a wire and does not require that it also be plugged into the electric utility power wall socket, it will always work.

The reverse communications system relies on data collected from various sources to include individual names and addresses within a notification database. If you would like to include add an alternative phone number for your residence, you can access the emergency notification website by going through the www.carsonfire.org website. Under the "emergency management" tab, click on "emergency notification."

There are no guarantees that every citizen can be contacted but with these methods, regional officials feel that we can quickly notify large sections of the local population.

Carson City has developed an evacaution plan. This plan is placed into effect as necessary for emergency evacuation orders. Residents will be notified, using the methods described in the notification process. Residents may be asked to evacuate the city entirely. The evacuation map shown on this brochure indicates the best route to use from within your area.

During an evacuation, resident will be informed of available shelters and directed to proceed to that location. Residents may also choose to evacuate to the home of friends and family, particularly if they live outside of the Carson City limits.

In some instances, residents will be asked to shelter in place. In this scenario, you will be instructed to remain within your home. Public safety officials may provide additional information on ways to protect yourself while in your home. These messages may include closing the windows and turning off ventilation systems

Emergency Planners understand that pets and service animals are a big part of your family. Every effort will be made to open a shelter specifically for animals. Animals can not generally share shelter locations, so a separate animal shelter location will be provided.
